Indianapolis has discovered a new summer resort this season and for wonder is making use of its discovery. Everybody knows that Indianapolis is slow to take up with new fads and fancies, not that the town is not progressive, but simply that it is ultra-conservative. This conservatism Culloch and Miss Messenger. is evidenced even in the summer resort | Miss Anna and Miss Belle Dean, dancing habit; those people who have been going party. to Mainkuckee or Wawasee or Harbor Point for years keep on going just because they have been going for years. But for some reason this summer marks an epoch in the matter, and any number of people are turning their backs on the usual lake and river resorts and going down instead to the quaint old town of Madison to stay anywhere from a week to the whole sum-

One explanation of the popularity of the retty town is that there is a considerable colony of Madison people in Indianapolis, and most of them seem to have selected this at their old home. Their example, however, influences others who have never belonged to Madison, but after a first visit to the place they want to belong to it a summer vacation's worth at least. One of the artistic women of the city, who has recently returned from a few days' stay in the town, declares her intention of going back as soon as possible to stay as long as possible. She says that the houses have a quaint old world look, and with their gardens full of the glow of vari-colored hollyhocks, the town is just now a paradise for painters. "I have always thought Indianapolis a beautiful city," she says, "but when I came back to its squares upon squares of frame houses with flat lawns, it looked the most commonplace of towns."

Another reason for the prestige of Madison as a summering town lies probably in the popularity of the Kentucky river trip. A great number of Indianapolis people are taking the trip this year, and so they have an opportunity incidentally to see the attractions of Madison, and the first view seems always to be convincing.

This is a love story—the story of a first and second love. The hero of the tale is a very youthful gentleman-so youthful that he has but recently attained to the dignity inconstancy of even miniature man. The first heroine is one of the most charming girls in town-pretty and chic and interesting. Grown-up men like her for her beauty and then go on liking her for her brightness. Her admirers are not wont to be fickle. Heroine No. 2 is a petite damsel not much bigger than Hero, but of unusual

For two or three years the small boy had adored Miss Blank. He talked incessantly of her, and sent her gifts and valentines when occasion offered; when she came to dinner he insisted upon sitting next to her, and the fact that he sometimes sat in a high chair, sometimes on the dictionary, Messrs. Stoddard, Miss Evans and Mr. detracted not a bit from his devotion.

But one day he started to kindergarten. That was the beginning of the end. The first day he took notice of Mary Adelaide, who was a co-pupil. Mary Adelaide knew

Smith, of Cleveland; Miss Marianna Munkhouse, of Terre Haute; Mrs. H. G. Harris and son, of Cleveland; Miss Antoinette Anderson, of St. Louis; Miss Clara Anderson. of Kewanee, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Crowell, of Franklin; Mrs. M. H. Delano, of California. After the ceremony there was a small reception for the members of the family, the bridal party and the out-of-town guests at the Foster home on North Pennsylvania street. A number of the relatives and friends of the bride and groom assisted in entertaining. Mr. and Mrs. Hanley left Wednesday for an extended lake and mountain trip and later will be at home in Cleveland. The marriage of Miss Katherine Ayres, daughter of Mrs. Helen M. Ayres, and Mr. David Percy Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Williams, which was solemnized Wednesday at noon in the Second Presbyterian Church, was one of the most beautiful weddings ever celebrated in Indianapolis. The colors chosen for the wedding were pink and green and the scheme of color memory contest. They were shown a table was carried out in the arches made of roses and ferns placed in each aisle. The front of the church was a mass of soft green, in hydrangeas and tall cathedral candles. The windows were banked in green and curtained by smilax and rose blossoms.

Prof. Charles A. Hansen was at the orplayed a programme of bridal music. Preceding the entrance Mrs. Alice Whallon sang the melody of "San Toi." The ushers, who walked first in the bridal party were Mr. John H. Holmes, of St. Louis; Mr. James Farrington, of Terre Haute; Dr. Francis O. Dorsey, Mr. Oscar Schmidt, Dr. Samuel Johnston and Mr. Ralph Lemcke. Following them came the maids, who walked in twos, Miss Mary Lord, of Chicago, with Miss Stella Adams; Miss Evelyn Goodsell, of Bridgeport, Mass., with Miss Mary Wilson, and Miss Ena Wilder, of Madison, N. J., with Miss Ella Vonnegut. The gowns worn by the malds were of pale green chiffon, and the shirred picture hats of green chiffon had wreaths of pink roses. Each of the maids carried an armful of pink roses. Mrs. Francis O. Dorsey, the matron of honor, followed the bridesmaids. She wore a gown of pink and her hat was of shirred pink chiffon with pink plumes. Her bouquet was of maldenhair ferns. The bride entered the church with her brother, Mr. Frederick Ayres, by whom she was given away. The bridal gown was an exquisite robe of point applique fashioned tulle veil was caught by a coronet of lilies of the valley and a shower of the same blossoms formed the bridal bouquet. At the pulpit the bride and her attendants were met by the bridegroom with his best man, Mr. Alan Williams, and the officiating clergyman, the Rev. Owen Davies Odell. Following the church service there was a wedding breakfast at the Ayres home on North Delaware street. The drawing rooms were adorned with pink roses and lilies of the valley and in the dining room the decoration was of pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. Williams left in the afternoon for an Eastern journey and later will be at home with Mrs. Ayres and family at their summer home at Magnolia Beach. Guests from a distance for the wedding were Mrs. James
